The Demon Slayer Corps is divided into nine Hashira, or Pillars. The Hashira are the nine most powerful swordsmen in the corps, and they are responsible for leading the corps and protecting humanity from the most powerful demons.

Structure

The Demon Slayer Corps is a highly organized and disciplined organization. The corps is divided into nine divisions, each of which is led by a Hashira. Each division has its own unique set of swordsmen and techniques.

The Demon Slayer Corps is also supported by a number of other organizations, including the Demon Slayer Corps Headquarters, the Butterfly Mansion, and the Swordsmith Village. The Demon Slayer Corps Headquarters is the central command of the corps, and it is where the Hashira meet to discuss strategy and make decisions. The Butterfly Mansion is a hospital where injured swordsmen can recover, and it is also where the corps' medical staff is based. The Swordsmith Village is where the corps' swords are forged and repaired.

Members

The Demon Slayer Corps is made up of a diverse group of swordsmen and women. The corps includes swordsmen from all walks of life, including farmers, fishermen, and even former criminals. However, all members of the corps share a common goal: to protect humanity from demons.
